SeaLink turns 25

Twenty five years ago SeaLink began, taking over the Philanderer III ferry service to Kangaroo Island.

Today, SeaLink Travel Group is a multi-million dollar, publicly-listed company owning businesses across Australia, including iconic Captain Cook Cruises on Sydney Harbour and on the Murray River, and it injects many millions of dollars into the Kangaroo Island community each year.

“In just 25 years our staff numbers have grown from 15 employees to over 600 and today we service more than three million passengers a year in Queensland, New South Wales, Northern Territory and South Australia,” Managing Director Jeff Ellison said.

“What began as a one-ferry operation now includes a fleet of 28 commercial vessels and brands such as Captain Cook Cruises, Australian Holiday Centre, Adelaide Sightseeing, Hop-On Hop-Off, Kangaroo Island Adventure Tours, Vivonne Bay Lodge, SeaLink Queensland and SeaLink Northern Territory.

“SeaLink is a South Australian success story and while our company continues to grow, Kangaroo Island has, and always will, play an important and central role in our operations.”

Chairman of Tourism Kangaroo Island, Pierre Gregor, said there was no doubt that the professional and reliable service provided by SeaLink had contributed to the island’s development.

“SeaLink’s domestic and international marketing plus the holiday packaging has been pivotal in the growth of tourism on Kangaroo Island,” Mr Gregor said.

“The positive direct and indirect economic impacts on the island are reflected in part through the development of new tourism products and experiences and associated employment outcomes.”

Mr Gregor also recognised SeaLink’s encouragement and mentoring of tourism business related skills through the virtual tourism business program conducted at the Kangatea campus of Kangaroo Island Community Education.

“It is a great initiative that seeks to develop skills valuable to the industry which may also assist with some of the youth retention challenges facing the island,” he said.

“The company’s sponsorship support to a significant range of community clubs, associations and individuals also helps to demonstrate SeaLink’s commitment to Kangaroo Island.”

SeaLink SA General Manager Donna Gauci said island communities needed a ferry service they could depend on and while other ferries had come and gone, SeaLink had stood the test of time.

“What began as a one-ferry operation on Kangaroo Island has been in place over time and that has given everyone ongoing security and certainty,” Ms Gauci said.

“With a fleet of two modern ferries and millions of dollars invested in terminals at Penneshaw and Cape Jervis as well as land-based transportation including coaches and four wheel-drives, SeaLink continues to invest heavily in the future of Kangaroo Island.”

“We’re proud of what SeaLink has achieved over the past 25 years and look forward to many more decades of continued growth for the company.”

Tour a sweet success story

When Clifford’s Honey Farm opened in December 1993, business owners Dave and Jenny Clifford welcomed self-drive visitors travelling on the SeaLink ferry to their farm gate shop and visitor centre.

In 1997, SeaLink began bringing visitors to the honey farm in bus groups and the farm’s relationship with the SA-based company has flourished ever since. “We were very honoured that SeaLink were keen to bring their visitors to our honey farm for tours,” Jenny Clifford said.

“Local people, including many who have worked for SeaLink, have been key in word-of-mouth advertising, promoting the honey farm to visitors from far and wide.”

Over the years the honey farm has shared its knowledge about what makes Kangaroo Island honey so special and the unique and rare Ligurian Honey Bees while Jenny has made her now famous honey ice-cream for the shop since opening day.

Jenny said from the beginning, a daily tour time slot was negotiated with SeaLink.

“What has been key is all the wonderful SeaLink staff, particularly the coach drivers,” Jenny said.

“They have been fantastic promoting the farm’s honey and in particular our honey ice-cream so when groups arrive to the farm their mouths are already watering in anticipation.”

Today, Clifford’s Honey Farm welcomes a SeaLink coach daily and other special groups are regularly booked.

Jenny said she fondly remembered SeaLink promotional events, particularly one where local business owners travelled with SeaLink staff on the SeaLink ferry to Port Adelaide for an onboard Kangaroo Island presentation to agents.

Another fond memory was when the Honey Farm renovated its interpretive centre and Dave and Jenny asked then SeaLink coach driver Michael Clark to cut the ribbon.

“We’ve always enjoyed a great relationship with SeaLink and wish them every success as they celebrate their 25th year of service to KL,” Ms Clifford said.

What has been key is all the wonderful SeaLink staff, particularly the coach drivers.”

SeaLink Travel Group wins another award

Two-time Australian Tourism Award winner and South Australian Hall of Fame inductee, SeaLink, has won at the South Australian Tourism Awards following a four year absence from entering.

SeaLink received the award in the Major Tour and Transport category at the Awards ceremony recently, and also won a gold medal in the Adventure Tourism category for Kangaroo Island Adventure Tours, which attracts independent travellers looking for an authentic and adventurous KI experience.

SeaLink Managing Director Jeff Ellison said the win reflected the hard work of SeaLink’s South Australian team and its Board who had ensured that SeaLink remained at the forefront of tourism nationally.

“SeaLink has experienced an amazing period of growth over the past few years and we’re proud that a South Australian company which began with just one ferry service has grown into a major tourism and transport company that employs 600 people and transports more than three million guests every year,” he said.

“We couldn’t have wished for a better way to celebrate our 25th year of business success.”

Mr Ellison said Kangaroo Island was Australia’s must-see destination, famous for its wildlife, food and wine and stunning scenery and extremely popular with domestic and international visitors alike.

“There is so much to see and do on Kangaroo Island from getting up close and personal with Australian SeaLions, kangaroos, Tamar wallabies and koalas to wandering along pristine beaches, sampling local produce and wines and staying in romantic light-house accommodation along a wild coast,” he said.

SeaLink is a family affair for the Howard clan.

Fourth generation islander Kevin Howard has been showing off his home to holidaymakers from around the globe for 14 years as a coach driver for Kangaroo Island SeaLink while his son Luke is the operations manager of Kangaroo Island Odyssey Tours, owned by SeaLink.

Over the years Kevin’s wife, Sandy, and his other son, Jimmy, have worked on the Island Navigator ferry.

“Four out of five of us have worked with SeaLink and they’ve always been good to us,” Mr Howard said.

“I really enjoy my job. I work in a luxury coach with 50 people who are on holidays and having a good time that rubs off. It’s almost a hit of a holiday for me every day too.”

Kevin joined the company in 1999 at a time when the farming community was doing it tough. He was working on the breakwater at Penneshaw when one of the other coach drivers told him about a job going at SeaLink.

“I did three tours as an observer and three accompanied by an experienced driver. Then I was on my own,” he said.

“Of course I was nervous. I’d spent most of my life on our family farm working with sheep and yelling at dogs and all of a sudden I was speaking to 30 to 50 people from all over the world.”

Kevin said the tours showed Kangaroo Island’s main attractions such as Seal Bay, Remarkable Rocks and Admirals Arch but he also gets to tell guests about island life and the many diverse businesses that drive the economy.

“Most days on tour I would see members of my family and the local community I grew up with. Guests on board the bus are amused by my wavering to everyone,” he said.

“We always see wildlife from the coach and the stunning coastal scenery on the walks that we do. The island is a pretty special place to me.”

“No two tours are the same.”

Experiencing the changes first-hand

When Joylene Ingram and Theresa Cussans joined SeaLink, ferry tickets were still being written out by hand. They’ve both seen the company grow from a one ferry operation into one of Australia’s most significant tourism and transport companies and say they are proud to work for a South Australian success story.

“I spent six months working somewhere else but I came back,” Theresa Cussans said. She has been with SeaLink for 23 years, spending her first six months in Penneshaw before moving to Adelaide. “It’s like a big family here and I’ve been lucky enough to work in so many different areas of the company,” she said. “I’ve made snow holiday bookings for the Ski Connection, booked travel for interstate guests to Clipsal 500 and organised accommodation along the Adelaide to Melbourne touring route.”

Joylene, who works in the Kingscote office and has lived on Kangaroo Island all her life, said she had met people from all over the world and had become used to “using her hands” when trying to communicate with people who understood little or no English.

“It’s always interesting when someone wanders into the office and wants to know what they can see and do,” she said. “We always seem to work it out somehow.

“There are so many people from the island working for SeaLink now - it’s a great place to work.”

Mike Smith, from Kangaroo Island Freight Operators, is one businessman who remembers carrying freight on the Troubridge and Island Sea-way. “The Troubridge used to take six hours and the Island Sea-way took eight hours with just three services a week,” Mr Smith said. He always supported the short Penneshaw to Cape Jervis crossing over the longer Kingscote to Port Adelaide service, which was often cancelled due to bad weather.

“I remember pointing out at a meeting in Kingscote that I’d taken 3000 sheep out of Jamestown and had them home before my competitor could even get to Jamestown,” he said.

“As a company, I think SeaLink has done a wonderful job and if reliability is what you go on, they have certainly been the most reliable and run a great schedule for Kangaroo Island.”

John Cussans from the Kangaroo Island Netball Association would like to thank SeaLink for their generous sponsorship of netballers on Kangaroo Island.

“The Seafront and Penneshaw Hotel wish to congratulate SeaLink on 25 years of tourism and transport services to Kangaroo Island and we wish you all the success for the next 25 years.”

Joylene is a familiar face on Kangaroo Island. “There are so many people from the island working for SeaLink now - it’s a great place to work.”
